Introduction

Boobies are seabirds in the genus Sula, family Sulidae. They are large, long-winged birds that plunge-dive for fish. The name "booby" originates from the Spanish word "bobo", meaning "stupid" or "clown", due to the birds' apparent lack of fear of humans.

Particularities

Boobies have several distinctive features:

- They have brightly colored feet, which they use in mating displays.
- They are known for their spectacular diving ability, plunging into the water from great heights to catch fish.
